

Encouraging Boys to be Life-Long Readers

- Provide a wide variety of reading materials in the home
Just as you like a variety of books to choose from depending on your mood/interest at the time, so do boys.
- Encourage fathers to become active in their sons' reading
Boys need to see their fathers or other older men reading if they're going to see it as "relevant" to their lives
- Encourage all adult males at home to share their reading preferences
- Model reading
- Set aside a daily time when everyone reads—turn off the TV, video games and computer
- Read to/with kids long after the lower elementary school grades
You're never too old to be read to!
- Have reading parties for kids (Diary of a Wimpy Kid, Harry Potter, Boxcar Children, Lemony Snicket, Redwall, etc.)
- Purchase books or bookstore gift cards for gifts for kids' friends
- Reward kids with trips to the bookstore/library
- Take advantage of special kids' programs at the local public library
It's also a great opportunity to get reading selections from your Children's Librarian! ☺
- Before or after seeing a movie with kids, read the book version together, then compare and contrast the two versions
- Provide a wide variety of response activities to books
- Read the newspaper with boys
Males tend to prefer non-fiction/informational reading over fiction
- Support reading selections—never ridicule
- Always allow a choice in book selection
- Do not think of comic books or graphic novels as sub-literature

A note about boys' reading selections:

Your son's choice may not be your first choice for his reading, but the first goal has to be getting him to see reading as enjoyable. If you force him to read things he won't like, he's never going to choose to read, he won't read often, and there's more likelihood he'll struggle with reading. So allow Goosebumps, Captain Underpants, books on audio, comic books and graphic novels... they're stepping stones!
